This relationship will give Ria customers more options to send and collect money in the United States, while Boost will benefit from increased foot traffic due to the similar customer base.

"It is a partnership that benefits both companies," said Juan Bianchi, CEO of Ria. "Ria increases its breadth and depth of coverage in the U.S. market, while Boost Mobile dealers gain an additional revenue stream, incremental store traffic, and more services to offer customers. It's definitely a win-win."

"We are really excited to be working with Ria Money Transfer to provide a world-class Money Transfer service to our customers nationwide. We are committed to constantly developing a slate of products and services to ensure our customers receive the best value proposition. We look forward to a successful launch ahead with our new collaboration with Ria Money Transfer," said Blair Frock, Boost Mobile Sales Operations Director.

Implementation is scheduled to roll out in phases starting in Q4 2018.
